The Desired Results Assessment System consists of three parts:

- The Desired Results Developmental Profile is used to document the progress of individual children.
- The Desired Results Parent Survey is used to assess parent satisfaction with the early childhood program and to understand families' strengths and needs.
- The Environment Rating Scale is used to assess the quality of the learning environment.

- The learning foundations tell us what children, with adequate support, typically learn and develop.
- The DRDP is an observational assessment that provides a structure and a tool for recording an individual child's development and documenting progress.
- The curriculum framework provides an approach to support children's learning as they grow and develop toward the foundations.
